Over the entrance to a famous ancient university were carved the words "Know Thyself." Making grateful acknowledgement to Prof. Overstreet we shall in a brief way put forward a few ideas about knowing ourselves.

Psychology is the science of human behavior. It is so new that many refuse to acknowledge it as a science. There is probably more nonsense written about psychology than on any other topic.

First there is the question of being mature or really grown up. How many are mature? Do you regress to the infantile by pushing off the disagreeing or to be tantrums or loud-mouthed fussing or other forms of self-indulgence known as chip-on-the-shoulder disagreeableness? If so you are not grown up.

Self control involves adjustment in actual ways to the natural and also to the human environment. Can you live with folk without childishly demanding your own way? Certain definite symptoms are recognizable in the infantile retreat from mature self-control. Consider these phenomena as examples; that the craze for fun after the war was actually retreat from real problems which we were too tired or afraid to face; that the bully is an infantile type even when he is found in adult life; that cussing when things go wrong is another indication of children in trousers. Little children want their own way regardless until they learn to respect other folks as having rights.

The only truly mature person is the one who has attained within himself the power and courage to face situations squarely and to call them by their right names.

Rev. W. H. Macdonald.

The dear old son watched the gaily clad cowboy dexterously swinging his lasso in the grounds of the circus.

"What a long rope," she said at last. "What do you use it for?"

"Waak, lady," he replied. "When I'm out west on the ranch, I use it for catching cows."

"Catching cows?" she echoed. "How very interesting. Tell me, what bait do you use?"

"I hear that you have a very clever daddy who understands sixteen languages," said the teacher.

"Must be a mistake, miss," replied Jessie. "When I took home my school report, he said, 'What is the meaning of this?'"

The city-dweller was reading a news paper when he was heard to exclaim: "Even the cows are doing it now."

"Doing what?" inquired his wife. "Hearling," he replied. "Right here in the headlines it says, 'Light native cow hides 7c.'"

CARSELAND

We are pleased to report that Margaret Peterson who has been quite sick in a Calgary Hospital is now feeling better and we trust on the way to recovery.

At the recent Conference of United Church in Calgary Rev. P. Forster was appointed to Munson. Rev. Jas. McKelvey comes from Delmar to Carseland and Rev. I. N. Hughson of Munson goes to Hartley. The changes take effect the first week in July.

On Thursday evening Mrs. Brander's pupils gave a recital in the Hall which reflected great credit on teacher and pupils. Mrs. Brander and daughter Margaret are associated together in the teaching. Mr. E. Stinson assisted in the program with violin selections. Mr. Hoover acted as chairman.

Rev. L. R. McDonald a former pastor here is visiting a few days with Mr. and Mrs. O. Moorehouse.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

The liver should pour out two pounds of bile into your system daily. If this bile is not drawn in the bowels, bile builds up your system. Bile gets congested. Bile builds up in the body, and you feel sour, sick and the world looks pink.

A more honest movement doesn't always get all the credit. You need something that will draw the bile down to the bowels. That's why Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile drawn freely and make you feel "up and up." Harrowing and gentle they make the bile flow freely. They do the work. Neville Chamberlain becomes British Premier. Extracts from a farewell address by Baldwin and words of high praise in the life of Chamberlain.

Let the end in this, the last speech as prime minister of this country, let the profound joy which is the result of millions of all races from end to end of the British Empire.

Here we have ceased to be an island. We are still an empire. And what is her secret? Freedom, ordered freedom within the law, with force in the background and not in the foreground, are blended in due proportions, in which state and citizen are both ends and means. An Empire, organized for peace and for the free development of the individual in and through an infinite variety of voluntary associations that neither defy the state nor its rulers.

The old doctrine of the divine right of kings is gone, but we have no intention of erecting in its place a new doctrine of the divine right of states, for no state that ever was is worthy of a free man's worship.

The fruits of the free spirit of man do not grow in the garden of tyranny. It is well said that slavery is a weed that grows in every soil. As long as we have the wisdom to keep the sovereign authority of this country as the sanctuary of liberty, the sacred temple consecrated to our common faith, men will turn their faces toward us and draw their breaths more freely.

Association of the peoples of the empire is rooted, and their fellowship is rooted in this doctrine of essential dignity of the individual human soul. That is the English secret, however feebly and faintly we have at times and places embraced and observed it.

Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer who succeeded to the coveted post which fate denied by a narrow margin to both his father and elder brother. As far back as 1880, it was the general opinion in Great Britain that Joseph Chamberlain would succeed Gladstone. In 1922, Austen Chamberlain was regarded as a certainty to succeed Balfour in the Conservative leadership, but his decision to stand by Lloyd George and the coalition ministry led to the selection of Donat Low, who later became prime minister.

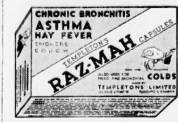

The younger son will not only place the name of Chamberlain on the list of Britain's prime ministers—a distinguished roll call of statesmen—but he succeeded in realizing his father's dream of linking the Empire closer by a system of preferential tariffs. As Chancellor of the Exchequer it fell to his lot to restore the protective system to Great Britain—to use tariffs for bargaining for better trading terms with other nations.

In his earlier years he devoted his attention to business affairs and municipal administration, leaving to his elder brother the task of carrying on the Chamberlain tradition for political service. He had charge of the family's commercial interests and he became Lord Mayor of Birmingham.

Sentiment throughout the nation turned toward protection in the years of depression and it was Neville Chamberlain who was head of the Treasury when a tariff budget was introduced. Since then his prestige has grown steadily and ever since the retirement of Mr. Baldwin has been mooted, no other name than his has been under serious consideration. It has been said that in the past three or four years of international strife and struggle he alone, among the top-rankers in public life, has made no serious political errors.

He is regarded as purposeful and sincere. The public rely on his integrity and sincerity. He is industrious and public spirited and all these attributes go a long way in British public life.
